Reflections

By J. HUGH SHEREFEY, JR.

FINISH THAT JOB

All of us have annoying jobs we put aside for a more convenient time; they are the ones that cause tension. While shaking his head a friend told me, "I'm swamped with little jobs; one I've put off doing until I was obliged to do it under most adverse conditions — cleaning leaves from the valleys of my roof. After our first rain, water backed up, ran under shingles and I had a damaged spot on my ceiling. I finished that job in fifteen minutes; now I must call in a painter who'll take a day to redecorate that ceiling and walls."

"New neighbors moved in," a friend told me. "We intended to call, welcome them to our neighborhood, but procrastinated. When we did, finally, we found two of the most interesting people it has been our good fortune to meet."

The little jobs we put off can be done quickly and often our compensation is far beyond expectations.
